2021 was a transformational time – one of economic uncertainty, radical change in business practices, new communication technologies and re-imagining work-life balance. Unlike transitions of the past, this period of transformation was swift, norm-shattering, and universal. No one escaped; all were impacted.

Women and historically marginalized communities were the most heavily impacted by COVID. Women owned businesses closed at higher levels during the pandemic predominantly because they are concentrated in sectors which saw the greatest drop in demand. Women in the US still have not recovered their pre-pandemic employment levels and economic status.

WEV’s clients reached out quickly asking for assistance in navigating the turbulent waters of the pandemic. Throughout 2021, we saw and heard emerging needs from our clients for services and programs to adapt to the new economic environment. Thanks to community support, we responded.

In this report you will learn about many of the new programs WEV launched in 2021, our commitment to creating greater community partnerships to assure our local communities stay strong and resilient.

While we have all been challenged by the transformational changes of the last few years, WEV is unabashedly optimistic about the future for women in business. We have seen our clients adapt, grow and prosper. The experiences of the pandemic led over 2.6 million women to start businesses last year. Women are committing to taking control of their finances and their economic empowerment. With your support, WEV will be there to assure they reach their goals.

With gratitude,

Kathy Odell
CEO

Creating a Flexible Learning Environment

In WEV’s 2021 annual client outcome assessment, respondents shared an overwhelming preference for a hybrid learning environment, an environment that accommodates flexibility for both schedules and learning styles. To provide a holistic approach of in-person and online services, quick downloads of information and deep dives into more complex topics, WEV invested in people, systems, and processes, significantly expanding learning options for our clients.

The pandemic revealed many things – among them the need of entrepreneurs to receive both broad and specific training. And to be able to acquire new learning and skills quickly to react to rapidly changing business circumstances.

WEV responded by adapting and expanding its core training classes and adding single topic, “deep dive” skill development courses. By the end of 2021, WEV was offering the greatest range of programming in its history. In addition to our foundational courses in Exploring Entrepreneurship and the LivePlan Business Planning course, focused classes in Digital Marketing, E-Commerce, and financial management/QuickBooks were made available in both English and Spanish.

Growth in Business Advisory Services

WEV’s Advisory Services saw an unprecedented jump in demand driven by the needs of business owners recovering from the economic disruption of the pandemic. WEV clients were requesting a more focused advisory offering, one that could quickly address challenges in an accelerated time period. WEV augmented its multi-year Thrive advisory program with short-term advisory services to support clients who were making real-time adjustments to their business strategies and financial projections. Clients were able to connect with Business Advisors and volunteer coaches for either targeted problem-solving or longer-term business support based upon their individual needs.

WEV also recognized that clients were better served when funding programs and advisory services were “bundled.” Combining funding (either loans or grants) with individualized advisory services has proven to produce better long-term business results than providing only funding. The results are so greatly improved that WEV is piloting a new Forgivable Loan and Business Coaching program to explore this innovative form of service pairing.
Increasing Access to Capital

83% of entrepreneurs have no access to bank financing and other traditional capital sources according to studies published by the Kaufmann Foundation. Capital access challenges are greatest for women and people of color. Research performed in California by the Small Business Majority found that 32% of business owners of color have been denied a loan, compared to 17% of white business owners. Without access to capital, these businesses are at a higher risk of failure, impacting the vitality of our local communities and our economic future.

WEV’s loan program was created to serve entrepreneurs who are unable to access capital from traditional banking sources. Over the last five years, WEV has provided over $2.5M in loans and awarded almost $1M in grants.

But funding alone does not assure small business owners will thrive and prosper. Studies show that small businesses perform best when funding is paired with advisory services. With that in mind, WEV created a new program pairing advisory services with funding.

An innovative approach to funding

In 2021, WEV piloted a Forgivable Business Loan and Coaching Program in Ventura County to augment its existing loan offerings. This program coupled access to funding with free coaching and training services for small business owners who identify as Hispanic, Latinx, Black, Indigenous or a Person of Color. Loans up to $10,000 were made available, and once program participants complete 10 hours of coaching, the loan converts to a grant.

Closing the Wealth Gap: Taking the Fear out of Finances

Small businesses are particularly vulnerable to failure during the first five years of operation, with a lack of owner’s financial literacy often playing a contributing factor. WEV has always included small business finance in business planning classes, and we have been providing stand-alone financial education and coaching programs since 2019. These programs were designed to provide business owners the skills and knowledge they need to understand and strengthen their business finances, something that has proved particularly vital in the face of ongoing economic uncertainty.

In 2021, WEV took an even stronger stand on financial education by recognizing it as a social justice issue. WEV believes that everyone should be able to improve their financial literacy through access to free financial education. This year, WEV allocated increased resources towards creating a Financial Empowerment webinar series to directly strengthen financial literacy for women and underrepresented entrepreneurs, the groups most vulnerable to economic instability.

WEV partnered with the Housing Authority of Santa Barbara in Summer 2021 to create a 4-part financial literacy series offered in English and Spanish. The webinars included both personal and small business finance topics and featured interactive sessions with community educators and professionals. All participants who completed the series received complimentary access to WEV’s Financial Empowerment Groups, where they met monthly to share their progress towards their goals and discuss any financial questions that arose.

“The partnership with WEV was instrumental in providing our low-income community with crucial financial literacy skills during times that COVID was taking a significant toll in everyone’s lives. The financial education, tips and resources provided were fundamental for our clients to plan, organize, and strategize their finances and be better prepared for the future.”

— Primitiva Hernandez, Family Self-Sufficiency Coordinator, Housing Authority of the City of Santa Barbara

Partner Spotlight

Students from CSUCI’s Entrepreneurship and Small Business Institute established a student-run business solutions agency, CI Solutions, in which they helped WEV clients strengthen their online presence. Students gained invaluable consulting experience and WEV clients received assistance in digital marketing. The timing could not have been better for WEV’s clients who were adapting to growing their audiences online due to the pandemic. While this innovative program was provided at no cost to clients, students were paid for their work thanks to the partnership with CSUCI, a gift from Deckers Foundation and a grant from the Outhwaite Foundation.

A special thanks to CSUCI’s Associate Professor of Marketing, Ekin Pehlivan, Ph.D., and Assistant Professor of Management, Cynthia Sherman, Ph.D., Director of the ESBI.
Expanding Opportunity in Our Community

In 2021, the California Employment Training Panel (ETP) awarded $500,000 to WEV as part of their Social Entrepreneurs for Economic Development initiative (SEED). The initiative supports the entrepreneurship of immigrants and limited English proficient individuals who face significant employment barriers, with the goal of increasing the state's economic diversity and spurring business innovation.

WEV utilized the ETP grant to pilot “Emprendedores,” a business training and micro-grant program. The program was initiated in North Santa Barbara County in 2021. The second cohort of the program began in February 2022 in Ventura County. Emprendedores, the Spanish term for entrepreneurs, provided a free 6-week training course to 55 aspiring and current entrepreneurs within the Indigenous and Hispanic community. Upon completion, participants were eligible to apply for a grant of $5,000. Under the grant, WEV will oversee the distribution of $375,000 to grantees in both Santa Barbara and Ventura Counties.

The program has created a pathway to economic mobility through entrepreneurship, with linguistically and culturally tailored business training, technical assistance, and funding. WEV’s partner agency, MICOP assisted WEV to create awareness of the program in Santa Maria and Oxnard.

Mayra Valdez always dreamed of opening her own restaurant but lacked the resources and business knowledge. Emprendedores provided her with the skills, confidence, and capital to begin her business journey. She is one of the 30 Santa Barbara County grant recipients and will be using the funds to purchase kitchen equipment, food supplies, and permits necessary to operate a legal food operation. Mayra hopes to obtain a Microenterprise Home Kitchen Operation (MEHKO) permit to begin selling fish tacos from her home and pop-up events in 2022.

Investing in Our Future

WEV donor and friend, Naomi Sommer, understood that a gift to WEV impacts the lives of women seeking the services to launch, stabilize, and grow a business. She saw that elevating women creates jobs and economic advances for our community, and wanted to ensure WEV remained a resource for years to come.

In 2006, Naomi made a transformational gift of $100,000 to launch WEV’s endowment. The endowment allows WEV to continue serving local entrepreneurs and solidifies Naomi’s legacy as one of dedication to our community and women’s economic empowerment.

In 2021, we know that income from the endowment would become vital for meeting the needs of women impacted by the pandemic. Combined with community support, the endowment has allowed WEV to support more clients than ever before.

Today, we invite you to consider joining WEV’s Legacy Society by making a planned gift to WEV and ensuring women and small business owners in our community have the resources to thrive in the future. The Legacy Society was created to thank our donors like Naomi, Tana, and Laurie who remember WEV in their wills, trusts, or other planned gifts. Members create a lasting impact on the community and will receive invitations to special Legacy Society recognition events throughout the year.

“I watched my mother build wealth over time starting from very little. I want to continue her work and help other women be able to do the same.”

—Tana Sommer-Belin, Naomi’s daughter and Legacy Society member

12 years after Naomi’s gift, community member and philanthropist, Laurie Converse increased WEV’s endowment with her own generous bequest. Laurie’s gift came at a time when the community needed stability after facing the challenges of natural disasters. Little did we know that income from the endowment would become vital for meeting the needs of women impacted by the pandemic. Combined with community support, the endowment has allowed WEV to support more clients than ever in 2021 with new innovative programs and expanded services.
